

Introduction

After listening to Mr. Habib's discussion on October 23, 2023, we now know about the Job Application. He was explaining to us the importance of completing a job application. To begin with, a job application consists of three sections: personal data, educational background, and work history. Employers can learn the most about you from this method since it demonstrates your abilities and successes.

In addition, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company gave a talk on October 24, 2023 (PPG). PPG is a multinational producer of specialized materials, paints, and coatings, but they are just now coming to provide internships within their organization. To get internships at this organization, we should be able to prepare an impressive job application that demonstrates our abilities.

Why is a Job Application important?

The most important step in the application process is frequently submitting a job application. This is because it's your chance to promote yourself to future employers. Because our resumes reflect our education, experience, and skills, employers can quickly determine how we can benefit a company.

Here is a similar example that Mr. Habib presented. Mr. Habib made the suggestion that the work experience be written with our courses considered more. Since our course is on data engineering, for instance, we are able to write more about collecting and analyzing data.

Career Development

Executive summary

To sum it up simply, a job application is essential when seeking occupation. For instance, we now use LinkedIn or email to send applications for jobs. Only the job application you submit to inform them about yourself before the interview is available to employers. Therefore, before applying for a job, it is essential to draft a better job application.

Reflection

I was greatly influenced by this discussion regarding the important job application. I realize that before starting my internship program, I should start drafting my job application and making it the best. Apart from that, I'll make an effort to take part in more computer science-related events like the upcoming Compfair in order to learn new skills that will be useful to me in the future.

Way forward

A stronger job application will lead to more favorable employment opportunities. He will eliminate you and locate the ideal job application if employers are not satisfied with your application.
